This volume is the seventh in the Advances in Service-Learning Research series, and presents a collection of papers selected from those presented at the Sixth International Service-learning Research, hosted by Portland State University in Portland, Oregon in October 2006. The theme of the conference, which is also the title of this volume, was "From Passion to Objectivity: International and Cross-Disciplinary Perspectives on Service-Learning Research." This theme was selected to showcase several important topics in contemporary service learning and community engagement research. Of key importance is the way in which the chapters selected for this volume reflect the evolution and maturation of research in the field of service-learning, moving from descriptive narratives of the passion for addressing social problems and inequities that was evident in much of the early research (and is still reflected today) to increasingly sophisticated research that draws on multiple methodologies, presents solid evidence, and offers the basis for replication and further exploration through future research.

This book seeks to advance our understanding of the relationship between information and human values by synthesizing the complementary but typically disconnected threads in the literature, reflecting on my 15 years of research on the relationship between information and human values, advancing our intellectual understanding of the key facets of this topic, and encouraging further research to continue exploring this important and timely research topic. The book begins with an explanation of what human values are and why they are important. Next, three distinct literatures on values, information, and technology are analyzed and synthesized, including the social psychology literature on human values, the information studies literature on the core values of librarianship, and the human-computer interaction literature on value-sensitive design. After that, three detailed case studies are presented based on reflections on a wide range of research studies. The first case study focuses on the role of human values in the design and use of educational simulations. The second case study focuses on the role of human values in the design and use of computational models. The final case study explores human values in communication via, about, or using information technology. The book concludes by laying out a values and design cycle for studying values in information and presenting an agenda for further research.

After the death of her mother, Su-Lin discovers she has an uncle and aunt, a rich Hong Kong couple who whisk her away to Europe on a fairytale trip. Their first stop is France at an exclusive boutique hotel fronting the Mediterranean. Terrence O'Connor knows all his flaws only too intimately, knows no woman could ever accept the sins of his past, knows he'll die alone. A silly mistake puts them both -- naked -- in the men's steam room. Terry's totally smitten. His past sins forgotten, he manipulates Su-Lin's uncle into a three-week cruise aboard his luxury yacht, the "Glory." In adjoining cabins with a connecting door, Su-Lin and Terry find they can't keep their hands off each other. To avoid further upset to her uncle, Su-Lin insists on keeping their relationship secret. But mere days into the cruise Terry finds Su-Lin unconscious, a victim of attempted murder. Someone is trying to kill his new lover...but why?
